Many cities owe their origin to accident; some to design. In the latter category may be placed most of those that sprang up upon this western earths end, and notably San Francisco. When the Englishman Richardson moved over from Saualito to Yerba Buena Cove in the summer of 1835, and cleared a place in the chaparral for his trading-tent; when the American Jacob P. Leese came up from Los Angeles, and in connection with his friends of Monterey, William Hinckley and Nathan Spear, erected a substantial frame building and established a commercial house there in the summer of 183G--it would appear that these...
