One assesses the agencies performance in assisting individuals in obtaining, maintaining, or regaining high-quality employment. The second assesses the agencies performance in ensuring that individuals from minority backgrounds have equal access to VR services. Education also publishes performance indicators that establish what constitutes minimum compliance with these performance standards. Six performance indicators were published for the employment standard, and one was published for the minority service standard. To have passing performance, state VR agencies must meet or exceed performance targets in four of the six categories for the first standard, and meet or exceed the performance target for the second standard. In 2005, GAO reported that Education could improve performance of this decentralized program through better performance measures and 14 monitoring. Specifically, we recommended that Education account for additional factors such as the economies and demographics of the states populations in its performance measures, or its performance targets, for individual state VR agencies to address these issues. We also noted that whatever system of performance measures Education chooses to use, without consequences or incentives to meet performance standards, state VR agencies will have little reason to achieve the targets Education has set for them. We recommended that Education consider developing new consequences for failure to meet required performance targets and incentives for encouraging good performance. While Education agreed with our recommendations, it is currently considering them as part of the development of its VR strategic performance plan, and has not adopted them to date. Earlier this year, GAO reported on national-level earnings outcomes for 15 SSA beneficiaries who completed VR from 2000 to 2003. Am.
