Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: .laces and beautiful dolls from France, the delicate Swiss watches, and the hundreds of other things that Europe has shared with her for so many years. She remembers, too, the countless gifts that aren t things at all--the music of Verdi, the poetry of Maeterlinck, and the memory of noble men and women like Savoronola and Joan of Arc. Do you wonder that America has labeled her own gifts, For Those Who Gave To Me ? DID you know that food sharing is an old, old custom in America--almost three centuries older than Mr. Hoover and the war? In fact, if the friendly Indians of long ago had not shared their corn with the handful of Pilgrim Fathers from England, the brave little infant colonies would have had a very hard time growing up into the big, healthy America of to-day. Surely everybody in the world who produces or shares food with others is a House of Friendship builder--and what a multitude of people that brings in all at once! Here they come, bearing good things from everywhere--tapioca and Brazil nuts from South America, fragrant spices from India, chocolate from Africa, coffee from Java, milk from our own American dairies--why, we can t even begin to tell about the people who are working hard this very minute to prepare good things for us to eat and drink. Because of the great war, many of the very people who helped to feed us are now having a...
