Carlton Patrick Rolle, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 198 x 129 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book of poetry explores the realm of survival. Each poem reflects a point when a person sacrifices themselves in a situation. in many instances for love. It explores what happens when someone holds onto an idea so much that it consumes them. These notions conflict with the core of the person and eventually forces them to become lost, confused, depraved, changed, and much more. Through this conflict: a person adapts to the situation, kills to survive, or a part (or whole) of themselves dies. Eventually so much changes that the person behind the mirror is unrecognizable. Confronting issues of self-image and personal value are brought out. After a while, it implores questions such as: How far are you willing to go? How deep have you sunken? Is it worth it? Should you shun it or learn from the experience? Treat the book as an instrument to learn from defeating notions of self. The illustrations presented are symbolic portrayals of the poems. Life isn't always black or white. Most people travel through both colors mixing into shades of grey. To be blind is to see one side or another. To know life there must balance. It is my intent to show others a glimpse of a paths that some have taken.
