Date :2008-09-01 version 1. The book's contents are a fundamental part of scientific computing, including numerical linear algebra, numerical approximation and numerical solution of equations three plates, the curriculum framework by the calculation method of numerical analysis and algorithm design component, the former study and propose a reasonable mathematical theory based on the calculation method of the calculation made by the latter method, the accuracy and efficiency in both directions from the analysis and evaluation. Has on the linear algebraic equations, matrix eigenvalue, non-linear equation (group), interpolation and fitting approximation, numerical calculus, ordinary differential equation initial value problems of the numerical calculations discussed in detail. System described in the book focus on the phenomenon from a variety of numerical and practical problems began to guide the reader observation and thinking, developing a problem awareness to prevent the mathematical concepts and definitions inexplicably fall from the sky; highlight the basic elements in the same time, to have a good grounding in mathematics provides the reader with room for improvement. The book uses heuristic model described strive to rigorous mathematical training emphasizes the difficulty and intensity; each chapter with more exercises and numerical experiments. Institute of Medicine book is mainly agricultural class and graduate students of economics and management disciplines of public math curriculum development, undergraduate mathematics is also available as a value analysis of the materials or reference books. On the need for more science and engineering computing scientists, this book is an appropriate reference. Contents: Introduction Chapter I Chapter II numerical solution of linear algebraic equations of Chapter III of the direct method for solving linear algebraic equations of the iterative method...
